awesome pictures from the artist's perspective.

This book takes you to what had been and still for the most part is an unknown part of Russia to most of the western world. A very beautiful, yet lonely, dark, and extremely cold place similar to much of Alaska's interior. The two elderly folks, a 94 year old man and a 102 year old woman interviewed that were the oldest man and woman in the city of Novisibirsk I found fascinating. The man fought in the Revolution and grew up in a two room shack with more than a dozen people, yet survived much of his life on a meager diet of potatoes and pork fat and the woman attributed her longevity to being kind to people and never having used tobacco or alcohol in her life, which was a rare occurrence in Soviet Russia.
