Customer Reviews

"A lot of effort went into National Geographic Little Kids First Big Book of Who to make it beautiful, to make it relevant, and to make it something a child would want to read (or be read to) multiple times. Every entry is more than a biography; for example, King Tut is used to introduce Howard Carter, the archeologist who discovered Tut's sarcophagus. The reader is presented with not only with Carter's biography but also with a map and ancient Egyptian history." --New York Journal Of Books "This book was written and designed with a young audience in mind. Accessible writing, beautiful illustrations, and a navigable organization make this title a first choice when seeking out information about famous people, past and present." -- Asheville Citizen-Times

"This colorful, oversize book features concise but engaging bios of some of the world's most well-known artists, inventors, scientists, explorers, and human-rights leaders." -- The HornBook.

gave as gift - granddaughter loved it

Great book!

It is amazing to teach and also learn so much from this book.

cute for kids.

Daughter loves this book! Very educational!

So happy I found these here on .. my 3 and 4 year olds are staring to love them and this collection is now what I gift to kids that I need to purchase gifts for My daughter just loves this book, she's only five and has picked up pretty quickly a lot of the names and what the people are known for, her favorites being king Tut, the Beatles, and Amelia Earhart! The pictures and information in this book are great, can't wait to purchase more from national geographic!

I love all these First Big Books of... great way to introduce kids to different facts, my 4 year old loves them! His favorite is the First Big Book of Space. He knows more about the planets than most kids his age, and I learned a thing or two myself. We love all these Big Books! :)
