Synopsis

17-year-old Evan Langston hides her struggles beneath long sleeves and jeans. When her cuts are discovered she is offered the chance to escape her life- even if it is just for the summer. Far from home on a Texas cattle ranch, Evan is determined to hide her past and start new, but there's a problem...Evan doesn't expect to feel love and acceptance from her new family. She doesn't expect to fall in love with a cow. She doesn't expect Jackson Finely. Suddenly she feels the carefully placed walls around her heart come crashing down, but in order to let someone in she is forced to face her past head on.

Customer Reviews

As an adult, I love reading young adult fiction. This author does a great job painting vivid descriptions of characters, scenes and the feelings of her characters. I could picture myself in Evan's bedroom, on the ranch and in the barn with No.21. The story has just the right amount of tension and the resolution makes you walk away wondering what will happen in the future between these characters. Woven masterfully into the story line, the author brings awareness to adolescent cutting and addresses positive ways to help teens deal with their problems. One point of concern for parents, may be the use of strong language by the author. Although, it is used in a manner that furthers the reader's understanding of the relationships in Evan's life and would be considered rather mild by some, it is an issue that I as a parent would want to be aware of.

I was lucky enough to read this when Sarah was doing her final edits. I enjoyed it as much the second time around.

This is fiction for young adults, which I don't typically read. I found the material a bit too mature for that audience. The mature content mixed with the straightforward plot and writing style intended for youth was a clash for me.

I found this book so amazing and captivating that I read it in 4 hours. I literally could not stop until I had finished! I was totally involved with all the characters, especially Evan.
