Materials On Hand: A Poetic Tale Of Compassionate Caregiving

Synopsis

Written as a poem a day the final year of her mother's life, Materials on Hand shines a light on the fine line between heartache and beauty. A spiritual journey set against the backdrop of dementia, the book serves as a roadmap to transcendence. Piercingly honest and self aware, Page Nolker distills the emotional complexities of caregiving into simple revelations about what it means to be human and the transforming power of unconditional love. Written with humor and compassion in a voice anyone can relate to, Materials on Hand reminds us that the potential for joy exists even in the darkest sorrow.

K. Page Nolker refers to herself as a storyteller. She views life as a collection of stories and appreciates that the way we tell our stories shape how and what we feel, our choices and our reality. After more than two decades writing and editing for businesses and entrepreneurs, Page applies her craft today to modeling the art of storytelling as our most powerful and important tool for defining and creating fulfilling lives. Page can be found at BabeEffect.com.

Beautifully written, this collection of poems describes an amazing journey of love, acceptance and transformation. Both heartbreaking and heart warming, the book had me crying one minute and laughing the next. Page's caring family and friends model compassion for us all. We should be so lucky to live and die as the Nolker clan.
